

Introducing the new look of "Connections"

March 1, 2013

We've been listening to our readers and, based upon feedback, Connections has been redesigned to be simple to use and easier to read on mobile devices. As you can see, we are sporting a new look and feel in an effort to make this newsletter more visually appealing and interactive. We will continue to cover issues of interest, including economic development, education and quality of life articles about volunteers and non-profit organizations. News clips about Los Alamos and community collaborations will be included, along with updates about our innovative science.

We are using a new distribution system to better align with modern interfaces and make it easy for you to automatically add or remove an email address from the subscription list.

As we move forward with the new Connections, please send any comments to let us know what you think. Feedback can be sent directly to connections@lanl.gov.

I hope you enjoy this issue,
